Time to take this show on the road. The dark, creepy road with the haunted house at the end. It's not that Julian minds his new job. It'd just be nice if it didn't come with so many murders. Especially when those murders end up with his not-quite-boyfriend talking to ghosts. Or, in this case, a ghoul. Their road trip to Colorado in the name of bonding for the new show Bump in the Night takes an unexpected side trip to Budding, Texas: Home of the Wandering Ghoul and a half-dozen missing person cases in the last ten years. Not exactly the best slogan for the tourism board. Just another day at work. Oscar takes it in stride, even as he's juggling some strange shifts in his abilities and Ezra's increasingly distant behavior, but when the Wandering Ghoul makes an up close and personal appearance one afternoon, it might be too much even for Oscar to handle. Between trying to understand the sudden changes in his abilities and whether or not a relationship with dedicated skeptic Julian is worth the possible heartache, Oscar has an undead fanboy who won't take no for an answer. They really should have just taken a plane. Nothing says "I love you" like a stake through the heart. Niall's just looking for a quiet life, ever since the botched vampire attack that turned him into a ghoul. He's even trying to stay off the pleasures of human flesh. But Jamie's luck can only last so long. This is a visceral story of love (or something like it) among the undead. Just when he thinks things can't get any stranger two ghosts show up at his home in a skeleton carriage and he winds up joining them on a journey beyond the real world to a place he never knew existed—the city of ghosts. There Oscar will discover a place where people go once they die, before they board a ship to the The Other Side. But will he find out who he really is?
